RWC pub ruckus

We can show the games but we just can't tell you

PIOP CHANDLER

QUEENSTOWN bar owners and promoters televising Rugby World Cup matches are kicking up a ruckus because they can't let people know.

The draconian rules for the New Zealand-hosted event, starting in three weeks' time, are designed to protect RWC sponsors.

But even community events like a Queenstown music concert and a school fundraiser are affected.

Nicholas Casey Parker is hiring out the Memorial Hall for a music gig on the last night of BAC, but can't advertise that he's also screening the final.

Parker, who hopes to sell about 200 tickets, says he's still working out a name for the event, "but
